Fashion in the 1910s, like the decade itself, may be divided into two periods: before the war and during the war. World War I had a profound effect on society and culture as a whole and fashion was no exception. While changes in women's fashion that manifested in the 1920s are often attributed to changes due to World War I, many of the popular styles of the twenties actually evolved from ...

1910-1919 | Fashion History Timeline

The 1810s were a continuation of the Neoclassical period in fashion, what fashion historian C.W. Cunnington named the “Vertical Epoch” (26). Fashion remained inspired by classical antiquity (Fig. 1); studies such as Costume of the Ancients published in 1809 and An Illustration of the Egyptian, Grecian, and Roman Costume published in 1810 were very influential in fashion design (Davidson 33).
